About Our Speaker:

“Nicole's Wacky & Wonderful World of Gadgets: PDAs, TiVo, and more!”

Nicole Hennig is the Web Manager & Usability Specialist for the MIT Libraries. Her field of expertise is usable web design and usability testing, and she has spoken on this topic at conferences such as National Online and Internet Librarian. She has taught continuing education courses on this topic at Simmons College Graduate School of Library & Information Science and NELINET. In June of 2001 she won the "Infinite Mile Award for Innovation and Creativity" given by her peers in the MIT Libraries. Before coming to MIT in January of 1999, she was the Systems Librarian for Bose Corporation in Framingham, MA, where she designed and managed the home page for the corporate Intranet. She has worked in academic, corporate, and non-profit libraries for over 15 years and was formerly a classical musician, playing pipe organ and harpsichord in the Boston area.
